- The International Labour Organization (ILO) adopted the Medical Examination of Young Persons (Sea) Convention, 1921 (No. 16), as one of the first Conventions.
- This was followed by the Medical Examination (Seafarers) Convention, 1946 (No. 73).
- These instruments have now been consolidated into the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006 (MLC, 2006). The laws of most maritime countries require that all seafarers carry a valid medical certificate.

- The International Maritime Organization's (IMO) International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers (STCW), 1978, as amended, states that every seafarer holding a certificate issued under the provisions of the Convention, who is serving at sea, shall also hold a valid medical certificate issued in accordance with the provisions of Regulation I/9 and of Section A-I/9 of the STCW Code.

With national fitness standards for seafarers varying widely, the set of international guidelines adopted in 1997 (the Guidelines for Conducting Pre-sea and Periodic Medical Fitness Examinations for Seafarers) was a first attempt towards harmonization

Guidelines from MLC 2006 supersede the Guidelines for Conducting Pre-sea and Periodic Medical Fitness Examinations for Seafarers, which were published by the ILO and the World Health Organization (WHO) in 1997.

DOCTORS ARE SPECIAL! BUT SEAFARERS DOCTORS ARE VERY SPECIAL!!!Q

- Medical practitioners performing such examinations should have a clear understanding of the special requirements of seafaring life, as their professional judgement is often critical to the lives of seafarers.
 - 1. should be a qualified medical practitioner currently accredited by the medical registration authority for the place where they are working
 - 2. should be experienced in general and occupational medicine or maritime occupational medicine
 - 3. should have knowledge of the living and working conditions on board ships and the job demands on seafarers in so far as they relate to the effects of health problems on fitness for work
 - 4. should have facilities for the conduct of examinations
 - 5. should enjoy professional independence from shipowners, seafarers, and their representatives
